A woman with short brown hair and glasses is shown from the chest up, wearing a light-colored cardigan over a dark turtleneck. She has her hand to her chin in a thinking pose. She is standing under a large, vibrant rainbow umbrella. The background is a dramatic scene of rain with bright white lightning bolts striking a dark, stormy sky. On the left, a dark blue umbrella is partially visible, with water dripping from its edge. The overall atmosphere is one of a heavy rainstorm.

Hello and good morning! Well, we're off to a good start in the south this week, as most of the rain from the weekend has disappeared – just a few patches of cloud and maybe some showers here on the east coast. They'll all clear up by lunchtime, though. Over the next day or so, London and the area around Kent can expect a couple of isolated showers, but mostly dry through until Thursday.

It's not such good news for the north-west this week, I'm afraid: more wet weather, and not a lot of sunshine. Some of today's showers will be h___y – and even thundery in Manchester and across the Pennines. Leeds will escape the th_____s, with d_____e and l_____t rain only throughout the rest of the day and tonight.

Elsewhere it becomes dry today, but with some f_____y patches towards Wales. In England, tomorrow morning will see a dry, b_____t start in most places, with high temperatures throughout the week. We might see one or two thunderstorms appearing as the week goes on, with temperatures everywhere at 29 to 30 degrees.

By the weekend, unfortunately, the dry weather will make way for mostly cloudy skies and rain. The rain will move from Scotland, down towards the north and reach the south coast by Saturday afternoon. Temperatures, at least, will stay mostly warm at around 21 degrees for the weekend. It might feel like a nice change from the high twenties and early thirties we'll see in the week. That's all from me until tomorrow. Enjoy the mini-heatwave while you can!
